Ben White Named Interim City Manager for Farmersville

Farmersville City Council members announce the appointment of Ben White as Interim City Manager for the City of Farmersville. Mr. White has served as Director of Public Works for the City of Farmersville since March, 2011. He replaces John Moran, previous City Manager since October 2009. Benjamin (Ben) L. White, P.E. is a Farmersville resident and Texas A & M electrical engineering graduate with over 30 years of experience in the engineering field. His experience includes a wide range of application experience in water systems, green building techniques, systems engineering, engineering management, quality engineering, software, testability, and test systems. Ben is also well versed in building construction techniques as a past participant in his family's residential construction business and is a highly trained productivity enhancement specialist with credentials as a Six Sigma Black Belt.

Ben is currently Secretary of the Farmersville Rotary Club, Past President of the Farmersville Chamber of Commerce, an active volunteer with the Farmersville High School robotics programs, and enjoys developing young people by using his tennis talents to coach youth and teen tennis athletes.

"Mr. White has extensive experience and has been an important part of the City's management since his employment. The City Council wholeheartedly supports his appointment to this important position, and we know the city will benefit greatly," says Farmersville Mayor Joe Helmberger.
